The Daily Gazetteer.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 1. 1740.

9th. 1674.

The following is an Impartial Account of the Affair of Dingwal, which has been most egregiously misrepresented in the Edinburgh News-papers, and from thence publish'd in the London Evening, of Thursday Oct. 25. and in other Papers.

ON the 30th of September, the stated Day for electing the Magistrates of Dingwal, Intimation was made by the proper Officers of the Law, to Sir Robert Munro the Provost, that several Letters of Caption (i. e. Writs for apprehending Debtors) were at that Time to be put in Execution against some of the Councillors; in regard they could not possibly be apprehended on any other Occasion; they being almost always either in the remotest Parts of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, or else retiring from Justice among the unaccessible Mountains in the Neighbourhood of Dingwal, and among the desperate, ungovernable People in Strathbrin; and therefore craving the Provost's Concurrence, and farther assuring him, that the Sheriff of the County had provided them with the Legal Posse. The Provost accordingly granted his Concurrence; and upon the Officers putting the said Writs in Execution, a Mob to the Number of 400 Persons, previously got together for that Purpose, did in a most desperate outrageous Manner, with large Clubs and Stones, not only assault the Officers of the Law, and their Parties (some of whom will never recover of their Wounds) but did in like Manner attack the Provost, Sheriffs, Justices of the Peace, Constables, and all others, who, upon the Application from the Officers of the Law, had been call'd in to commend the Peace, and that to the imminent Danger of their Lives. The Officers of the Law and their Parties, tho' few in Number and unarmed, did with great Resolution make their Way thro' the Mob, who still followed them upwards of a Mile and a Half out of the Town, pelting them all the Way with Stones, and beating them with Clubs, so that many of them were very much wounded, when by Accident a Party of Men, who by Appointment of the Justices of the Peace, according to Act of Parliament, were then mending the Roads, came in to the Officers Assistance; by which Means the Prisoners (whom the Mob had all this time endeavour'd to rescue from Justice) were safely carried to Gaol and committed: While in the mean time the Provost and the rest of the Councillors went (which before they could not attempt without great peril of their Lives) to the Council-House, and proceeded to the Election of Magistrates, when Duncan Munro, Esq; was chosen Provost; John Munro of Killichean, and William Fraser, Baillies. But the Mob finding they were disappointed in their Designs by this Re-inforcement seasonably coming up to the Officers Assistance, return'd back to Dingwal in the utmost Fury and Rage, besieged the House of Baillie William Fraser (where the Magistrates were return'd from the Council-House, and with the other Gentlemen were going to Dinner) threatening to set fire to the House, and had actually batter'd down the Windows, in order to come at the Magistrates and other Gentlemen within.

Upon this, the Sheriff, George Munro of Culcairn, Esq; and the other Gentlemen, went out and read the Proclamation against Riots, and afterwards explain'd it to them in their Mother-tongue (the Sheriff and the other Gentlemen being all the while attack'd, abus'd and peked in the most outrageous Manner imaginable); but the Mob paid no manner of Regard to it, and, instead of dispersing, as the Law directs, they became more outrageous and desperate, and in this Manner continued upwards of two Hours after the Proclamation was read: When at length two or three Constables, being inform'd of the Danger the Magistrates and the other Gentlemen were in, return'd with a small Party of the Men that had been with the Officers; who no sooner entered the Town than the Mob attack'd them again: Upon which the Constables order'd them to return to their respective Habitations, in Terms of the Proclamation, and under the Penalties therein contained, which they not regarding, but still continuing their Violence and Outrage, two Blunt Shots were fir'd by the Constables over their Heads; upon which the Mob return'd with still greater Fury, and animated each other, saying, it was nothing but Powder: When at last the Constables were oblig'd to fire a Sharp Shot, which happen'd to wound a Man and a Woman, the latter of whom, Alexander Mackenzie's Wife, is since dead. And now the Party standing upon their Defence, prevented any farther Mischief. The Sheriff, Justices, and Constables were oblig'd to stay in Town till about two o' Clock in the Afternoon next Day, when they were reliev'd by a Detachment from a Company in the Earl of Crawford's Regiment that then lay at Inverness, about seven Miles from Dingwal.

Extract of a Letter from Capt. John Peddie, of the Ship Prince of Orange, from St. Christopher's, dated Downs, Oct. 30. 1740.

"This comes to acquaint you of my safe Arrival in the Downs, this Morning at 3 o'Clock, after a very tedious Passage, beating 5 Weeks with an Easterly Wind, and on the 23d of this Month in Lat. 49: 40, about 30 Leagues to the Westward of Scilly, at Half an Hour past One, a Spanish Privateer came up with us: We fir'd 3 Shot at him, he hoisted English Colours and bore down upon us; we taking him for an English Man of War made no Resistance. When he came under our Stern, we discover'd him to be an Enemy: He pour'd in his Broadside upon us with all his Small Arms. Our Guns being all wet below, we had nothing ready to return him but our Quarter-Deck Guns and Small Arms; I clapp'd the Helm hard a Weather, and run him aboard on the Quarter, which did him considerable Damage. After he got clear he shot a-head, and lay by a Quarter of an Hour, by which Time we were all ready to receive him; then he bore down upon us, and we gave it him pretty heartily for three Hours and an half, when he bore away: I bore after him, but finding he got from us, I clapp'd on a Wind again He was a Ship of 18 Guns 6 Pounders, and I believe as many Swivels, and about 150 Men at least, tho' I believe we lessen'd his Number before he went away. We lost in the Action the Boatswain and 3 more; 5 of our Sailors, and a Negro Woman wounded."
